LONDON, May 4.—A taxicab ride of more than 1,000 miles, the longest one on record, has been made by Charles Klein, a New York playwright.

Calling a taxicab off the cabrank in the Strand, Mr. Klein ordered the most astonished chauffeur to head for Edinburgh. The driver took the instructions as a joke, but soon realizing that Mr. Klein was serious he protested that he could not undertake so long a journey at such a short notice, as he had a wife and family at home.

However, the driver's scruples were overcome, and the car set off for Edinburgh.

From Edinburgh, the car proceeded to Glasgow, from which port a steamer was taken for Londonderry.

After an extensive tour through Ireland, Mr. Klein dismissed the taxicabman at the Queen's Hotel, Queens-town. The trip took five days. Mr. Klein is now on the way to New York on the Cedric, while the taxicab driver is hurrying back to London with the black bag.

Mr. Klein, who is a native of London, served an apprenticeship as a writer on a leading paper, and then, as Charles Frohman. He has written several successful plays since 1890, among them "The Auctioneer," "The Music Master," and "The Girl of the Year," which David Warfield has been the star for several seasons in the London and the Museum. He is now in the Lyric Theatre, and "The Third Degree," which is running now in the Hudson

"Hamilton" declared Miss Hamilton, "is a mistake. It is not about Hamilton. In fact, I think it is safe to say he never heard about Hamilton until he received the request to debate. He was so surprised he seized upon the chance to have his yelp heard."

"Hamilton may have been the rake that John says he was. In his day many men were rakes, but that fact in itself is no tragedy. It is the lack of nation. The entire country runs on the wheels that Hamilton planned, and this is the reason the public to demand an extended answer."

"But we must consider the differences that have occurred between the conditions of today govern the fame and memory of Hamilton? We have become a more advanced nation, and it is not that much that was once pardoned is now reckoned deadly sin. But we must

The will of former Representative Joseph W. Babcock, which was filed in Probate Court today, discloses a pretty story of Mr. Babcock's affection for a fatherless child, and his appreciation of faithful services rendered to his family by the child's mother.

The will leaves $10,000 to Mrs. Annie V. Babcock, who has been a cook in the family for twenty years. It is to be used in educating her daughter.

Mrs. Babcock's husband was appointed a clerk at the request of former Speaker Henderson in the office of the Register of Wills. During the epidemic of smallpox in Washington about four years ago, he died.

The last time Mr. Rabcock left his house before his fatal illness, he went to the office of his lawyer and drew up a codicil to the will, leaving $10,000 to Mrs. Vanderlass.

The will provides only $1 to his adopted daughter, Amella B. Reed, of Sparta, Wis.

To his niece, Mary M. Merrill, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Mr. Rabcock left $5,000, and a like amount to Mrs. Barney, a niece of his first wife, who resides in Needham, Wis.

The widow is bequeathed his home at 1 B street, together with the furnishings, and one-third of the estate remaining after all bequests are satisfied.

The family home in Needham, Wis., is a three-story brick building.
